In particular, ropes and cords are often used in connection with lifting and/or pulling functions. Further, cables may be used to maintain tension on a load to provide a resisting force against a force being applied to the load. Though cables or cables and ropes may be used for a wide variety of functions, rope and cable products are often used in connection with lifting or pulling operations. A common situation is in the application of lifting and/or pulling devices such as cranes and hoists. In such applications, power is often provided via an electric motor that drives a gearbox. The gearbox is driven by an input shaft, and the input shaft is driven by an output member that is driven by a cable, rope or wire rope. The output member drives a lifting or pulling device. In such applications, the input shaft may rotate or translate to drive the output member. In particular, the input shaft is mounted to a pulley, which is then driven by an electric motor. Typically, the input shaft, the pulley and the electric motor are mounted to a base member. Flexible cables, wire ropes, and other such lifting/pulling devices often include a housing defining a bore having a rope lumen formed through an axial center of the housing. Each end of the rope includes a rope eyelet or other device for retaining the rope in the bore. A rope or cable is generally placed through the lumen and positioned within the housing. A force may be applied to the housing and the rope that, in combination with the rope lumen, creates a frictional resistance to the rotation or translation of the input shaft. However, when the force is removed, the rope will often unwind from the housing. Efforts to prevent this unwinding have been undertaken with varying degrees of success. However, the present inventors have recognized that, particularly in 05a79cecff

I'd like to check if any of the items in a list can be seen a maximum of once. My current test: for i in l: if any(x in i for x in l): return False Is there a way to check that? I'd like to return False if the list has a maximum of one of the items. A: You can use collections.Counter: >>> from collections import Counter >>> l = [1,2,2,4] >>> c = Counter(l) >>> c.most_common() [(4, 3), (2, 3), (1, 3)] >>> Counter(l) == c True >>> Counter(l) == c and Counter(l)!= c False Here, Counter(l) == c returns True because Counter(l) has the same elements as c. Paradise Found. Yosemite Sunrise Sierra's "Painted Hills" have been a lifelong goal, but I've only been able to view them from the side of the highway, usually with big rigs blocking much of the view, so I put my final exclamation point in that line. A few weeks ago, I was part of a group of photographers taking a group camping trip from Southern California into Yosemite National Park. As we were driving through the park, we saw this massive, previously unseen and unsuspected 'back country' area within the park. The sun was just starting to light up the north facing slopes, pouring through the granite rock and meadow, highlighting the shades of
