We're going to go through 20 Photoshop tools and how to use them for useful results. We'll have illustrations, examples and tips for those using the tools in their daily workflow. 20 Photoshop Tools every graphic designer should know Word Recognition This is the first and often the most helpful graphic designer tool. It allows to extract text in an image automatically. Different versions of Photoshop have different text and word recognition tools, but for now let's go with the Master Collection, Photoshop CC 2018 or the full version of Photoshop CC 2019. Master Collection You have to mark the text you want to extract with a dashed or dotted line. You can select the text with a black box, or add a rectangle in a green color. You can use an eyedropper or create a layer using Lasso tool to get text more precisely. You can set a strength of the selection. If the text layer is not strong enough, you'll have to increase the layer's Opacity (for example, 40). There are buttons for selecting: words, lines, words+lines or all characters. You can then extract the text using the "e" button on the right. Use this to export the text to a file or directly on the screen. Photoshop CC 2018 or 2019 You can select the text with a black box, or add a rectangle in a green color. You can use an eyedropper or create a layer using Lasso tool to get text more precisely. You can select text on a layer by selecting it with the magic wand tool or clicking on the text tool. In the options window, select the option "Add Layers to Selection". Then click on the text to apply the selection to the layer. You can select the text with a black box, or add a rectangle in a green color. There are buttons for selecting: words, lines, words+lines or all characters. You can then extract the text using the "e" button on the right. Use this to export the text to a file or directly on the screen. Save Duplicate All great graphic designers are always looking for the best way to achieve the same result. They are always looking for the technique to apply, and so they save them to use them later. This tool a681f4349e

A former child star is accusing "Rain Man" director and producer Gary Marshall of sexual harassment, abuse and intimidation. The woman, known only as "Jane Doe" to protect her identity, claims she met Marshall in the 1980s when she was 14 years old, and they became sexually intimate. "My experience with Gary Marshall was not a pleasant one, and it will forever be seared in my memory," she said in a statement to Variety. "Every time I saw Gary Marshall, I was reminded of my 14-year-old self being preyed upon by a man that was several years older than I was." Marshall, who died in 2015, was married to actress Jill Clayburgh from 1979 to 1985. The "Happy Days" director was also known for his work in TV, including starring in "Happy Days" and "Laverne and Shirley." The woman said she was fired from a film Marshall was making with Warner Bros. in 1984 because she had a curfew violation. She said he insisted she stay at his home instead of returning home as they had agreed. After several hours of ignoring her requests to leave, she said she was raped. The woman said she reported the incident to the LAPD, but the LAPD didn't launch an investigation because of the lapse in time. She said she called Marshall's office hours after the rape and was allegedly told he had left the country. She said she eventually quit the industry. The woman also said that Marshall allegedly lost a tooth while trying to punch her during an argument. She said she regretted working for Marshall because she says he sexually harassed her and gave her drugs while they were on location. She said she was hired to do a cameo in "Rain Man" because of the movie "Happy Days" but didn't receive any payment. She said her last day on set was Nov. 11, 1988. She said she wanted to file a police report after reading an article about #MeToo, but when she went to a police station her claim was ignored. "People have been afraid to talk about it for years because they were afraid of not being believed," she said. Marshall's representative didn't immediately respond to Variety's request for comment. Marshall was married to Clayburgh

Tips from the Thunder: Tips for Recognizing and Recognizing Roles The Oklahoma Thunder has a few new faces, but familiar names for fans of the NBA. We've compiled the names and roles for each of the Thunder players in order to explain their roles to fans. 1. James Harden Harden plays as a point guard and is usually tasked with maintaining control of the ball while directing the flow of the game. "He's a point guard," Scott Brooks said of Harden's role. "He makes plays in transition. He pushes the ball. He gets into the paint and gets assists. He gets shots for others. He's a pest. He hits the defensive boards. He sets up for other people. His court vision is good. He makes sure it's easy for the people we're playing." 2. Russell Westbrook Westbrook plays the role of "The Stealer," as he has one of the best natural hoops IQ's in the league. Brooks said Westbrook's intensity on defense is what sets him apart. "He's one of the best defenders in the league. He's the one that we've been asking to play his position," he said. "We've always had multiple good defenders that I believe are capable of playing his position." Westbrook defends everything near and dear to him and was a willing and capable shot blocker in college. For a center to be effective in this league, they need to be capable of hanging in the paint. If he is a pest and a good shot blocker, he can become very useful as a rim protector. "We're trying to defend different positions," Scott Brooks said. "I have players that are best suited in certain areas of the floor. Russ is best suited as a rim protector." In other words, he can be a valuable asset as someone who can run the floor, rebound, box out or defend the rim. "He's a guy that wants to do some of the dirty work in the paint," Thunder coach Scott Brooks said. "He's a guy that has a purpose, a reason why he's on the floor. He works hard on both ends of the floor. He's a great rebounder." 3. Kevin Durant Durant is one of the most exciting players to watch in the NBA. He can score in a variety of ways and has become one of the most efficient scorers in the league.
