What's new in Deep Sky Derelicts - Station Life:

Finding Stuff Last night I was going through the forums on the Stardock website when I found this: I've been working on a project to add more color to the existing landscape damage concept in starsiege. It's not done yet, but I've been playing with the effect and integrating it with the interior and exterior lighting systems of starsiege. I've been able to identify a few craters that look pretty nice in the store. The terrain modules are kind of what I'm using, mainly to demonstrate different kinds of effects: Crater Deep Hangar Highrise Large Cliff The video below is just a demo, and I don't see it going to be put up on youtube. But it is a start. It's a tutorial on how to mix an obvious interior with a wide-open space. When you beat on the cave door the light changes and you can see the damage the cave did and see how a combination of weight and crowding can destroy the interior. It can affect the fair-skinned elves, and the ice goblins. It's pure imagination but it has the feel of Star Wars and Star Trek. As I have said in various threads, raw materials are what I am looking for when building and maintaining stations. The modules shown above are a start; more modules from the derelict will follow. This is a good post and worth looking at, but I wouldn't say there are craters like that around New York, but that doesn't mean there aren't There are craters on Mars, but they are much smaller than the ones you have posted, and on Mars you see craters far more regularly. EDIT: I am an engineer so I take it the project is awesome but without drones etc, can we look at some photos, I'd like to see if I can spot some craters myself Archeology I am certain that on Mars the craters are the most noticeable features. The asteroids don't have crater like features EDIT: and anyone that is going to the storescape, please do upload some photos, I make no background noise, nothing that stands out. 1. It can affect the fair-skinned elves, and the ice goblins. It's pure imagination but it has the feel of Star Wars and Star Trek. How? Was it required to add some props of Darth Vader and the Bacta Tank?
