The Magic Wand allows you to select an object in the image and automatically select a fill color and outline around the object. It is useful for cleaning up images, removing duplicate objects from photos, and quickly sketching an object that you want to retain. There are an almost unlimited number of fonts available in Photoshop. Types are basically files that set fonts apart from each other. Photoshop comes with a number of standard, commonly used fonts like Arial, Times, and Calibri. There are also custom fonts available. To create a custom font, you can use an open program like FontLab or create a font with a program like Adobe Typekit. Photoshop comes with a variety of fonts that look like the original Photoshop font. However, these fonts can only be used in Photoshop. They are not available to be used in other Adobe programs, like Illustrator or InDesign, as well as other programs like Chrome or Firefox. An example of a Photoshop font is Photoshop Sans. It is a simple, clean font that I often use when working with texts in Photoshop. You can download Photoshop Sans to get a feel for how it looks. An example of a custom font would be the Adobe Grotesque font. It is a cool grunge font with a hand-drawn look, similar to the font that is installed in the new Photoshop CC. You can download it here. As mentioned before, you can use the Magic Wand tool to select a color and use that color for the fill and the outline of an image. Click the PSD button to open it up. Now, click the Select button in the bottom left corner of the new Photoshop document. You should see a new palette appear on the canvas. The color of the swatch changes depending on what you clicked on. When you press delete on the keyboard, you will have a live swatch palette on the canvas. You can use this palette to select different colors from the image. If you are selecting a lot of colors, it is usually easier to remove the swatch and then add it again as
