The innovative technology is showcased in the latest FIFA video, which shows real-life player movements in the popular Pride of Britain Goalscreen. New 'Let It Rip' Body Motion System "We've taken the level of detail to a new level," explained Milan Popov, FIFA community manager. "We've created the 'Let It Rip' Body Motion System, which allows us to animate player cuts, tackles and more in a completely new way. The camera moves with the player, giving more cinematic-like shots and allowing the players to perform more acrobatic actions. This allows for new levels of interaction on and off the pitch, as the camera follows the movements of players." New Authenticity to Achieve True-to-life Feel Based on the high-intensity action in the video, which was shot in a new custom-built motion capture space, FIFA 22's new animation system reacts dynamically to real-life player movements. "We wanted to make this game more reactive to player actions, and the new system does this more effectively than any of our previous FIFA games," said Popov. "With the high-energy nature of the new 'Let It Rip' Body Motion System, we're able to show players engaging in a completely new way and achieving a high level of authenticity - something that's not previously possible in the FIFA games." New Player Cam Makes it Easy for Gameplay Designers to Test New Features in the Game Furthering this new level of realism, the same motion capture data used in the live footage was also used to create a new Player Cam mode. The camera can be controlled by the game's designers to identify and test potential features in a live-action game environment. For example, the Player Cam can be focused on an opposing player to preview what is happening, or a referee can be used to preview the options available for a given action, such as the 'complimentary' pass. "The player cam has been instrumental in bringing the FIFA games to a new level of player authenticity," said Popov. "It's like having the players in the game alongside you - you can even go one step further and decide what type of pass is the best option for the current situation, from the real-life player perspective.

What's new in Fifa 22:

- Added 2019 UEFA European Championships. FIFA 22 updates the looks of the Brazilian Barclays Premier League and the Turkish Süper Lig to match international calendars, and makes major improvements to atmospheric and lighting models
- Introduces "HyperMotion Technology," which uses motion capture data collected from 22 real-life players playing a complete, high-intensity football match in motion capture suits. The data collected from player movements, tackles, aerial duels and on-ball actions is used to power FIFA 22 gameplay.
- Includes the 2019 UEFA European Championships and the Premier League Fantasy League Challenge. Just downloaded Fifa 22. It seems pretty good - I was in Cagliari and wanted to have that atmosphere but found that with good training and self-motivation I could recreate the feeling in the UK. It's a great game. Indeed, it's good to know that EA has included e.g. Serie A and the Bundesliga, and even acknowledges the DFB (DFL). EA often tends to overlook the German clubs on the PS3 - but it's all good. I just hope they go to include more teams. It would be great if they added 20/21, for example, and for the likes of Bayern, Borussia Dortmund and Bayern München II (a woman could play in a real Bayern München II kit; I don't mean a female in a real Monti bhf uniform, I mean a serious Bayern München II bhf team!), including the U 19 team. I like the way elements on the kit change, depending on whether you have the PS4 or the PS3. Yes, me too. (I already bought it anyways b/c I want to play it at 3435 instead of the main game's 0449) For me personally, there's also the fact that I like the general feel, as soon as I get to England after Cesc's departure (possibly due to the smaller space, more direct attentions but perhaps more on that later), the first few games, thank you, I think it's as good as any other FIFA, feel it! The rest of the time, frankly, not really that animated/delightful. I really, very much liked sim racing. Aside from Sim racergames that had teams anyway, I loved that was that it was a sport with an actual season. More than MCR and every other
