I could not find anything on the net and would like to stick to the obvious. A: EDIT: The old solution is much worse, as it doesn't iterate the "loglist", it just runs through one by one. That's because it has no internal state or knowledge of what it has already processed. Here's a solution that's not much different from the one proposed by @mfe. The above idea of iterating through the list by using a StringTokenizer to tokenize each filename works, but I think it's also worth mentioning the more general solution which is to use the Enumeration API. If you look at the Enumeration implementation, it's entirely possible to delegate your own Token creation
