Suppose a number  $y$ , is randomly sampled from an uniform distribution over the interval  $(0,1)$ . Find: 1) The probability density function,  $f(x)$  of  $x = \min(y,1-y)$ . 2) The probability that  $x > 0.5$  For first part, I know that I have to integrate  $1$  over  $x$ . I also know that I have to make  $y$  zero by squaring it, and then I have  $f(x) = \frac{1}{2} -$ $\frac{(1-x)^2}{2}$ . But I don't know if it is the right approach. Also for the second part, how do I approach that problem? A: 1) The probability density function,  $f(x)$  of  $x = \min(y, 1-y)$  I don't know that this is a good way of doing it, but if we interpret  $x$  in the way that you're thinking, then you can take the probabilities of  $x$  being within particular intervals of  $(0,1)$  to find the probability density function. For example,  $x \in [0,0.25]$  has probability density function  $f(x) = 0.5x$ .
