JBatchRunner allows you to launch multiple programs by pressing the spacebar or Enter key at the same time. This enables you to access Notepad, regedit, Task Manager and other programs that you insert. It is a simple to use command window that can run in both window and silent modes. It can also kill your programs when you decide to exit. It is designed to be used by novice users and can be downloaded from the Google Code: JBatchRunner Features: 1) Can be run in

"window" and "silent" modes (You can enter your programs one by one using the spacebar, or launch them all at once using the Enter key) 2) Able to show and hide a running program (This is a unique feature from other windows batchrunner that only opens the program if its currently not running.) 3) Able to kill your programs when you decide to exit or press the Ctrl+Break key when running in window mode 4) Nice progress bar to show you what is happening 5) Classic Windows UI when you are running in window mode Installation: 1) Install JBatchRunner.exe 2) Run JBatchRunner.exe (Instructions will be shown when JBatchRunner is launched) Screenshot: Screenshots are from Launch and Exit of programs. Some programs cannot be directly accessed because of this, which is why it is recommended to use JBatchRunner. JBatchRunner can be used in both window and "silent" mode. You can run each program one by one by pressing the spacebar or use Enter key to run all programs. You can also launch all programs at the same time pressing Enter key. NB: JBatchRunner will only launch programs when no command window is displayed, so programs cannot be interacted with during the batch process. Installation: Install JBatchRunner.exe. Run JBatchRunner.exe. JBatchRunner uses the Classic Windows UI when you are running in Window mode. It also has a progress bar to let you know what is happening. I found 2 vulnerabilities, one of them is in the way how jbatch.exe handles all of the 'new-instance' commands. The first flaw allows remote code execution. I hope you enjoy it. If not, I might still get back to this. Vector3dLab 0.98 was released yesterday, the biggest change from 0.97 version is X-Plane 11 compatibility. It supports now most of the X-Plane 11 features and many new ones like VSH 1.0, VRV 0.5 and FK 7.0. It also fixes many errors and bugs in various features. Besides compatibility, Vector3dLab 0.98 new feature is Code Comparison. It shows how changes affect the code. - Vector3dLab can make comparison for two.fsk files. If you open 'compareFsk' option, it will take the two.fsk files as a argument, open the two.fsk files, then compare them and show the difference between the two. - Vector3dLab is a ready-to-use toolkit, it does not have any prerequisite. JBatchRunner was developed based on my motivation to create a simple little tool that when run would open a remote command window/command prompt and launch a batch file. While it was hardly big and effective, it was fun to write
