Her parents have been kidnapped. She soon learns they were traveling on Route 66 to meet her grandparents. Then, a tornado strikes, whisking Rose away to the fantastical realm of Cragmore, where she discovers that her parents were trapped by a sinister villain who was determined to use her as an unwitting pawn in his evil plan to escape from Cragmore. Q: What are all the differences between various Torchlights? I already know what the HD Voyager, in the Saturn Plug, is, but I am not sure what the other torches are. In particular, what are the differences between the different ones? Are they all multipurpose? A: All the Torches are used in the game for a specialized purpose. Though, some are better suited to specific things than the others. From movies to the early missions, the Torches in the game are as following: Base: Comes with version 1.0 Torchlight. Can be modified by equipping damage shields which reduce the damage taken by the Torch as long as your shields remain full. These damage shields however start emptying when you take damage, so you need to keep the rest of your crew in good health, lest they themselves take damage from your own Torch light. Equipped in the mission "Robot Down" HD Voyager: Comes with version 1.5 Torchlight. Comes with an active shield that lowers the enemy shields providing your lasers have the correct number of blades. However, since they have only one active shield, this means that if they overheat, they tend to fall over. Equipped in the mission "Prey" Tactical: Comes with version 1.5 Torchlight. Does not lower enemy shields, but instead expands the size of enemies your weapons can target. When it overheats, it begins to fail. Equipped in "Prey" and "Sacrifice" Ballistic:
