Hepatocyte growth factor (HGF) is a multifunctional peptide that binds to and selectively activates the cellular tyrosine kinase MET receptor. Through the HGF/MET pathway, HGF promotes the proliferation, survival, migration, and morphogenesis of a diverse array of normal cell types. The activities of HGF have been implicated in the pathogenesis of many types of human cancers through various mechanisms, including promotion of tumor cell invasion and metastasis and stimulation of angiogenesis. Recently, it has been found that treatment of cells with HGF results in the activation of the unfolded protein response (UPR), which is a complex cellular signaling pathway that coordinates the endoplasmic reticulum (ER) stress response. The
