To analyze the appropriateness of obstetrical procedures and services in a tertiary hospital in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil. It is a descriptive study, in which the medical reports of all patients delivered in the study period (12 months), were evaluated using the Appropriateness Evaluation Protocol (AEP) with predefined criteria. The data were analyzed by group of interventions, according to the level of perinatal supervision. It was found that, in the group "Level I", 95.7% of the procedures were classified as appropriate, while in the group "Level II", this proportion was 86.1%. For the services evaluated, in the group "Level I", 96.2% of the procedures were considered appropriate; in the group "Level II", this proportion
