its a shame she didnt stay up all night working on that grammy-winning song. but that was nina simone. a workaholic with a passion for life and a kidlike sense of wonder. and while she was working, she wasnt just working. sometime in the middle of the night, she simply fell asleep. and when the sun rose, she woke up with a song. in fact, she always woke up with a song. for example, when she first arrived at a recording session, she knew her songs and didn't need to be told what to play. and then her music teacher at the lincoln high school in philadelphia gave nina the nickname nina simone. the name stuck, and to the end of her life, she kept it. eventually, the name became a brand, and she also became a cult-figure, sort of a media-generated, '60s spiritual grandmother whose every word and image struck a chord in the hearts of millions. and with that, the very essence of nina simone, a deeply spiritual, mystical woman, a musician whose soul-searching songs about love, sex, race, and the american dream, were to her, forever a reflection of herself, became a world brand. because she was more than a singer. she was a world-conqueror of the soul. like simone, julianne nicholson too is another one of those special souls who are born to create. she is the daughter of the renowned british actors, sir john and dame maggie. she was born in london and went to the prestigious st pauls school for girls in london. later on, she attended london college of music and the royal academy of music where she graduated with honors, and then did some post-graduate studies at the guildhall school of music and drama. she's not only a multi-award winning musician and singer, but she's also an accomplished fashion designer, model and singer/songwriter. she's a feminist, and an activist for women's rights. she's the first and only woman to win the prestigious world's best singer award, and her song love, love has even been ranked as the best love song of all time. julianne has collaborated with such artists as eric clapton, stevie wonder, martha reeves, anita baker, and stevie nicks. she has been a vocalist for the queen of soul, aretha franklin and with the likes of michael bolton, kenny g, and even with sting.
