Download Linkwitz-Riley Crossover Calculator Linkwitz-Riley Crossover Calculator is a very lightweight tool for calculating the Linkwitz-Riley crossover frequency, resistance or capacitance of a Linkwitz-Riley filter. The program gives you the possibility to make quick calculations for known values with a simple and intuitive interface. It's very portable, and all the program's can be executed from a single executable file that only requires a simple double-click to launch. No installation is involved, and there are no prerequisites. Make quick calculations for Linkwitz-Riley crossover filters Unsurprisingly, the program focuses on functionality rather than appearance, and so it adopts a standard-looking window with a well-organized layout. To make a calculation, it's necessary to enter two known values when it comes to the X'over frequency (Hz), preferred resistance (kOhms) and preferred capacitance (nf). Enter any two known values to make calculations Calculations are carried out instantly with the click of a button, so you can check out results on the bottom side, along with a circuit diagram. If you want to further make adjustments, you can enable 12db/Octave mode as well as select low or high pass. Unfortunately, there are no options implemented for exporting the data or circuit diagram to file, copying them to the clipboard, or printing them. On the other hand, you can consult a table of commonly preferred component values, which are considered to be standard within a particular component range. Check out a circuit diagram representing the Linkwitz-Riley filter Taking everything into account, Linkwitz-Riley Crossover Calculator delivers a simple and straightforward solution for calculating the crossover frequency, resistance or capacitance of a Linkwitz-Riley filter. However, it doesn't have options for exporting the data to use in external applications. AVG download manager (incl. What's New In Linkwitz-Riley Crossover Calculator?

Linkwitz-Riley Crossover Calculator is a light-weight and portable tool that can be used to calculate the frequency or resistance or capacitance of Linkwitz-Riley filters. Links:Bakersfield, California (CNN) - So far, Mitt Romney's not talking about Newt Gingrich's criticisms. There is no evidence he's aware of them. But Rick Santorum's team is, and they think the former House speaker's recent barrage against the GOP front-runner was as direct and personal as any other negative attack. "He [Gingrich] is out of bounds," Santorum told CNN on Thursday. "He was insulting to me personally. I'm not insulted by somebody saying what they believe, but he didn't do that." Santorum, a former senator from Pennsylvania, added: "I think he is what he is and he said what he said. He also said some very nice things about me, and I didn't need somebody that was insulting me in my personal life." Santorum also denied reports that he'd recently taken some money from Gingrich, as some observers had interpreted in the fallout from Tuesday's South Carolina debate. "The money he got was for donations to the Victory Fund," Santorum said. "And I'm not aware that that money ever made it to him. It went to charities to the president and to other campaigns." Santorum's campaign adviser, Chris Schrimpf, said he wasn't aware of any money being given directly to Gingrich. He also told CNN that Santorum hadn't pulled out of the race, despite a report by Politico. In an interview on CNN Wednesday, Santorum was asked whether he'd be at the December 6 caucuses in Colorado. He replied, "absolutely." The former Pennsylvania senator has since withdrawn that promise. "We'll see how we do on Saturday," Santorum said. "We'll cross that bridge when we get to it." He added: "I do have some obligation to be there in Colorado. I don't want to make any promises until I know what's going to happen in South Carolina. "I've got a lot to do in South Carolina and that's my number one focus. I'm not going to be distracted by any of that. We've got a lot to do here in the state of South Carolina and that's where our focus is." Despite Santorum's response to the recent fallout, Gingrich told CNN's Piers Morgan Thursday that he's still convinced that the former Pennsylvania senator's campaign is "imploding." "Look, this is a campaign that is imploding. They are throwing anything at the wall to see what sticks," he said. But Santorum said Thursday that he has "the greatest respect" for Gingrich. "You've got to know that I have a lot of respect for him and I'm proud
